

The year 2020 marks the 12th year that the United Nations celebrates World Oceans Day on June 8, to remind each of us the values that the Ocean brings to humanity.

The Ocean is the source generating most of the oxygen for living creatures, regulating the climate, and supplying hundreds of millions tons of food for us every year.

HOWEVER, the marine ecosystem is seriously affected, mostly because of human activities.

In order to call for collective efforts in protecting the environment and preserving our marine ecosystems sustainably, in 2020, UNESCO will not only celebrate the anniversaries and organize communications campaigns but also conduct the activities on the ground with the aim to create a platform for energetic youths and young scientists to initiate new and innovative solutions.

Tune in and enjoy the upcoming activities of UNESCO!

#oceanwithoutplastic

#daiduongkhongnhua

#BeatPlasticPollution

#ZeroWasteFuture